ON THE COVER

Dr. E. L. Setzler, professor, registrar and academic dean, this spring completes his 40th year at Lenoir Rhyne college. Despite his lengthy tenure, the administrator looks forward to several more years of service to Lenoir Rhyne before retirement. But he has asked the board of trustees to relieve him of his administrative duties that he may devote more time to classroom instruction. President Cromer has indicated the offices of registrar and academic dean may be separated when a replacement is appointed.

On The Campus

Alumni Day Planned As Alumni Weekend

Alumni Day at Lenoir Rhyne this month will assume the nature of an alumni weekend for members of many of the reunion classes.

At the suggestion of the Alumni Day committee of the Alumni Association, some of the reunion classes are planning to begin activity on the evening before Alumni Day on Saturday, May 29.

Class dinners, open houses and other informal get-togethers are slated by class reunion chairmen for Friday evening, May 28.

The class members will stay overnight in Hickory for the formal program which begins the following day. Overnight accommodations are being arranged through the Alumni Office either in the college dormitories or in a Hickory motel or hotel.

The Saturday program will open in the morning with an alumni golf tournament at the Lake Hickory Country Club and a bridge tournament on the campus.

The semi-annual meeting of the Alumni Association Board of Directors will also be held at 10 a.m. in the Cromer college center.

Following the noon luncheon at the college center, thirteen alumni classes will hold reunions at 2 p.m. in the Rhyne (old administration) building or Mauney music building.

A new event, student body reunions, will follow at 4 p.m. in the music building. One phase of the event will bring together members of the Classes of 1949, 1950, 1951 and 1952 for a program focusing on the Lenoir Rhyne year 1948-49 when members of all four classes were on campus. A similar event will be held simultaneously for the Classes of 1930, 1931, 1932, and 1933, which will also hold reunions on that day.

The annual Alumni Banquet will be held at 6 p.m. in the college center. Speaker for the event will be Col. Dan F. Thompson, former Director of Operations for the U. S. Air Force Missile Test Center at Cape Kennedy. He is also a member of the "Real Eight" company, a group of divers who recently recovered underwater treasures valued at $2,000,000 off the coast of Florida. The valuables were discovered aboard sunken Spanish ships.

The Rev. Robert F. Shelby, Jr., of Belmont will serve as toastmaster for the banquet, which will include the Alumni Association's annual presentation of the Distinguished Alumni Award and Distinguished Service Award.

Following the banquet, the association will sponsor a dance in the center for members of the graduating senior class and members of the association.

The Alumni Day program this year was planned by an association committee headed by the Rev. Paul L. Morgan of Greensboro and composed of the class reunion chairmen.

Classes holding reunions, the places for their Saturday afternoon meetings, and the names of the reunion chairmen were announced as follows:

Building Dedicated

A Lutheran minister issued a call at Lenoir Rhyne college this month for less "horizontal education" in colleges and universities and more "vertical education."

Horizontal education, the Rev. Robert F. Shelby of Belmont said, "increases the sense of being lost" among students; vertical education "probes deeply into reality and life."

The minister, a Lenoir Rhyne graduate, spoke May 2 when the college dedicated its new Lineberger Administration building.

He told supporters of the Lutheran institution, "We stand as a church and as Christians always under the mandate of our Master to 'go . . . teach', but we are also responsible to Him for the kind and the quality of education that is taught."

He said:

"There is a kind of education that is superficial. It is a peril to society because it presents facts without proper interpretation and appraisal. It is ultra-modern, sophisticated. 'Be a free-thinker', it challenges. It is a half-truth and folly. It sends our youth out confused and bewildered—to be parasites, not builders.

"There is a kind of education that is secular. It emphasizes material, social, and economic success. It is evil because it presents only partial truth.

"There is a kind of education that is pagan. It is the subtlest of perils, because it presents human reason as truth; technical knowledge as ultimate power; material success as security, rebellion without a sense of responsibility, and selfish license as real freedom."

Christian education, he continued, is the ultimate because "it relates all of learning and all of living to Jesus Christ, who is the Truth.

"Christianity and education belong together. They have been united by God. They are counterparts one to the other, and are not complete without one another.

"Together they are the foundation of our democracy and the safeguard of our future. We dare not separate them."

He declared an educational strategy is in error if it holds to the theory that man can be departmentalized, and intellect nourished without concern for his morals and his soul.

"The urgent problems that we face today are moral, civic, social and spiritual," he added. "We believe firmly that the only hope of stemming the tide of immorality, of social, civic, and spiritual groping, unrest and rebellion in our world is in Christian education."

The new office building at Lenoir Rhyne opened in March, constructed at a cost of $340,000. The Lineberger Foundation of Belmont gave the building in memory of A. C. Lineberger, Belmont textile executive and one-time trustee of Lenoir Rhyne who died in 1951.

The son of the late Mr. Lineberger, Archibald C. Lineberger, Jr., unveiled the dedication plaque at the building entrance to close the dedication program.

Also present for the ceremony were the four trustees of the Lineberger Foundation: Henry A. Lineberger of Charlotte, John R. Crawford, Jr., of Salisbury, and J. Harold and Joseph W. Lineberger of Belmont.

Other program participants included the Rev. Cyrus L. Frazier, pastor of Good Shepherd Lutheran church, Mt. Holly; H. E. Isenhour of Salisbury, chairman of the board of trustees of Lenoir Rhyne; Dr. George R. Whittecar of Salisbury, president of the North Carolina Synod of the Lutheran Church in America; and Lenoir Rhyne President Voigt R. Cromer.

The college's band and a cappella choir presented music for the service.

The two-floor building contains offices for the president, academic dean, registrar, dean of students, admissions secretary, director of summer school, director of public relations and alumni affairs, treasurer and business manager. Conference rooms, interview rooms and a meeting room for the board of trustees are also included.

Accredits Lenoir Rhyne

The North Carolina State Board of Education has approved Lenoir Rhyne college for the education and certification of public school teachers under the state's new program of institutional accreditation.

Dr. Charles F. Carroll, State Superintendent of Public Instruction, notified the institution of its accreditation in a recent letter to Lenoir Rhyne President Voigt R. Cromer. The accreditation became effective last September and continues for a five-year period.

The State Board of Education approved the undergraduate program of Lenoir Rhyne for the preparation of elementary teachers, and secondary school teachers in the fields of business education, English, foreign language (French and Spanish), mathematics, music, physical education and health, science, and social studies.

Lenoir Rhyne was certified under the state's new "approved program approach to certification of school teachers." Previously, the state certified teachers on the basis of their individual programs of study; now the state approves the teacher program within the institution, such approval automatically qualifying all teacher graduates within the program.

The accreditation followed a self-study program conducted by the Lenoir Rhyne faculty and administrators over the past two years.

Students Elect Officers

Out-of-state students dominated the annual student body elections on the Lenoir Rhyne campus this spring by winning all four of the offices.

Only one North Carolinian ran for office. Wayne Yoder of Lincolnton, brother of the present president of the student body, lost his bid for the vice-presidency. The position went to Larry Wilson of Beloit, Ohio.

In the elections for secretary and treasurer, it was out-of-state student against out-of-state student.

Miss Pamela Peer of Toms Brook, Va., won the secretary position by defeating a fellow Virginian, Miss Peggy Taylor of Virginia Beach.

The office of treasurer went to another Virginian, James Riley of Berryville, Va. He won over a South Carolinian, Edward Gratzick of Charleston.

In the presidential election, it was no contest. Mark Cooper, the current vice-president, ran without opposition and will succeed Larry Yoder of Lincolnton as head of the student body. Cooper is an economics major from Baton Rouge, La.

The current officers, in addition to Yoder and Cooper, are Miss Ann Baker of Fallston, secretary, and Miss Johnnie Schrum of Lincolnton.

Opposes Speaker Ban

The faculty of Lenoir Rhyne college has taken action urging repeal of the speaker-ban law by the present session of the North Carolina General Assembly.

In a resolution forwarded to Catawba county representatives in the General Assembly, the Lenoir Rhyne professors denounced the statue as "an attempt to prevent the promulgation or expression of an idea by censorship and prohibition."

"The only successful method by which an idea may be killed", the professors declared, is through "free discussion, and the exposure of the errors therein or the weaknesses thereof."

The speaker-ban law was passed by the North Carolina General Assembly June 25, 1963. It bars known Communists or those who have taken the Fifth Amendment in loyalty cases from speaking at state-supported institutions.

The resolution calling for repeal was adopted by a heavy majority of the 75 faculty members during a regular meeting on the Lenoir Rhyne campus in March.

Lenoir Rhyne, owned and operated by the North Carolina Synod of the Lutheran Church in America, is not subject to the limitations of the speaker-ban law. Its professors took the action to "endorse expressions and resolutions tending to the same end which have been announced by our colleagues of the faculties of other institutions of higher education, both public and private, located in North Carolina."

The faculty resolution asserted that the State of North Carolina through the legislation "has attempted to dictate to its educational institutions in such manner that institutional and academic freedom, administrative action, and the opportunity for the students of those institutions to enjoy free access to the 'market place' of ideas are gravely infringed."

The Lutheran college faculty stated further:

"We have full confidence in our fellow members of the 'society of scholars' who make up the faculties of the public institutions of higher education in this State, the Administrative officials thereof, and the supervisory boards thereof—a confidence that they are seeking to impart to their students only a desire to know the truth that sets man free, and to give to their students an opportunity to seek that truth."

The resolution was introduced by William P. Brandon, associate professor of government and history who has been a member of the Lenoir Rhyne faculty since 1947.

Synod Endows Chair

The North Carolina Synod of the Lutheran Church in America, which owns and operates Lenoir Rhyne, voted early this month to establish a $150,000 professorship at the college.

The endowment fund will be known as the Michael Peeler Professorship. The synod asked that the college board of trustees designate a faculty position for the professorship at some future date.

The professorship is named in memory of Michael Peeler, a Salisbury businessman who bequeathed to the synod a trust fund which produces a $30,000 income yearly. One-half of the annual income the synod receives from the trust fund will be given to Lenoir Rhyne for the next ten years to establish the professorship.

At present the college has three other professorships: the Martin Luther Stevens Professorship in religion ($220,000), the Dr. and Mrs. Glenn R. Frye Professorship in education ($100,000), and the Arthur Cyrus Chaffee Professorship in nursing.

The gift from the Lutheran synod was authorized during the synod's annual three-day convention in Burlington early this month.

The 400 convention delegates also voted to increase the synod's annual support of Lenoir Rhyne in 1966 by $20,000. At present the synod contributes to the college $100,000 annually.

LINEBERGER ADMINISTRATION Building, the newest addition to the Lenoir Rhyne campus, was dedicated during a special service on May 2. The building, located near the Rhyne (old administration) building, was given to the college by the Lineberger Foundation of Belmont as a part of the 1963 Fund for Progress campaign. The two-floor structure was erected at a cost of $340,000.

During the convention balloting, the delegates elected two new Lenoir Rhyne trustees. The Rev. Hoyle Whiteside of Burlington was named to replace Dr. J. White Iddings of Albemarle, and Dr. Hubert V. Park of Raleigh was elected to replace Malcolm M. Palmer of Albemarle.

Six other trustees were re-elected to the 24-member board for three-year terms. They are Ray W. Cline of Concord, Dr. J. Frank Davis of Wilmington, the Rev. R. Douglas Fritz of Salisbury, Dr. Glenn R. Frye of Hickory, Dr. Glenn E. Ketner of Salisbury, and O. Leonard Moretz of Hickory.

Anniversary Planned

Lenoir Rhyne college will observe its 75th anniversary beginning this fall and continuing for a period of twelve months.

The Diamond Jubilee year will open with the first convocation of the 1965-66 academic year in September and close with a public birthday celebration on or near the 75th anniversary in September 1966.

Plans for the observance were announced this spring by President Voigt R. Cromer. The college first opened its doors on Sept. 1, 1891.

In announcing plans to the 1200-member student body, President Cromer reported that committees for planning and coordinating the observance are being organized. The committee memberships include representatives of the board of trustees, the student body, the faculty, administration, alumni, and citizens of the local community.

The central committee planning the observance is headed by President Cromer as chairman. Other members include Larry Wilson of the student body, the Rev. Dwight Conrad of Hickory, Dr. H. E. Isenhour of Salisbury, Dr. George R. Whittecar of Salisbury, the Rev. Paul L. Morgan of Greensboro, Severn Allen of Hickory, Wallace Jorgenson of Charlotte, Mrs. A. Neil Perry of Gastonia, Dr. Robin F. Gatwood of the college faculty, and Harry Livengood and Jeff Norris of the college administration.

The committee also includes four sub-committee chairmen. Charles Jeffers of Hickory is chairman of the special events committee; David Wright of Greensboro is chairman of the promotion committee; Prof. Russell E. Brown of Hickory is chairman of the regular events committee; and Dr. Ernest L. Misenheimer of Salisbury is chairman of the visual presentations committee.

Detailed plans for the observance will be announced during the summer.
